EXPLANATORY STATEMENT

This Bill seeks to amend the Women’s Charter (Cap. 353) for the following main purposes:

- (a) to enhance the enforcement measures that can be taken against a person who defaults in maintenance payments payable under a maintenance order;
- (b) to mitigate the impact of divorces on those who will be affected by it through the introduction of new measures to mandate marriage preparation courses for prescribed classes of persons, to mandate mediation and counselling in divorce proceedings involving children, and to make financial provision for the maintenance of children of divorced parents through the transfer of divided matrimonial assets into a child’s Children Development Account opened under the Children Development Co-Savings Act (Cap. 38);
- (c) to empower a Singapore court to make ancillary orders after a divorce, legal separation or annulment of marriage obtained pursuant to foreign judicial proceedings if certain conditions are met;
- (d) to change the 15 day residency requirement for applying for a marriage licence such that the requirement needs to be satisfied only where either of the parties to a intended marriage is not a Singapore citizens or permanent resident; and
- (e) to specify the additional information that needs to be stated on a statutory declaration filed under sections 17(2) and 21.

The Bill also seeks to make related amendments to the Guardianship of Infants Act (Cap. 122) by inserting a new section 11A to align the procedure with regards to reliance on expert advice pertaining to child welfare in custody proceedings under that Act with that set out in section 130 of the Women’s Charter.

Clause 1 relates to the short title and commencement.

Clause 2 inserts a new section 12A to require certain prescribed classes of persons to attend one or more prescribed marriage preparation programmes before they will be issued with a marriage licence. The purpose of this requirement is to reduce the rate of divorce amongst the prescribed classes of persons.

Clause 3 amends section 17 so that the 15 day residency requirement to be satisfied by persons who wish to apply for a marriage licence needs to be fulfilled by one of the parties to the proposed marriage only if either of them is not a Singapore citizen or permanent resident. The section is also amended to require additional information to be stated in a statutory declaration filed under section 17(2). The additional information pertains to whether the parties to a proposed marriage have successfully completed such marriage preparation programme as may be required under the new section 12A and where a party was previously married, whether he owes any outstanding maintenance arrears under a maintenance order. The declaration as to whether a party owes any maintenance arrears is intended to put the future spouse on notice about his outstanding financial obligations to his other family. For the purposes of verifying the accuracy of a declaration as to a person's outstanding maintenance arrears, the Registrar of Marriages is empowered to obtain information from a District Court or Magistrate's Court as to the declarant's maintenance obligations under any existing maintenance order made by the Court.

Clause 4 repeals and re-enacts section 21(1) to require additional information to be furnished to the Minister by way of a statutory declaration before a special marriage licence will be issued by the Minister. The additional information pertains to whether the parties have attended and successfully completed a marriage preparation programme if required to do so under the new section 12A and to whether one of the parties to the marriage owes any maintenance arrears, if he was previously married.

Clause 5 amends section 50 to make it mandatory for parties undergoing divorce, judicial separation or annulment of marriage proceedings and who have children to the marriage to attend mediation or counselling as may be ordered by the court.

Clause 6 amends section 71 to introduce new enforcement measures that may be taken against persons who have defaulted on maintenance payments (maintenance defaulters). Specifically, the court can now order such a person, in addition to the existing sanctions under the section, to furnish security against any future arrears of maintenance by way of a banker's guarantee, to attend financial counselling and to perform unpaid community service. A person to whom maintenance is owed or his caregiver, guardian or authorised representative may also report a maintenance defaulter to a credit bureau, and the credit bureau may provide the information to its members for them to assess the creditworthiness of the maintenance defaulter.

Clause 7 introduces new sections 71A, 71B and 71C.

The new section 71A sets out the procedure for making a demand on a banker's guarantee furnished under the new section 71(1)(d) and provides for the treatment of any amount claimed under the banker's guarantee which is in excess of the maintenance arrears owed by a maintenance defaulter at the time of the default.

The new section 71B empowers a person who is to have provided financial counselling or conducted any other related programme to a maintenance defaulter under an order of court to make a complaint to court if the maintenance defaulter fails to attend such counselling or programme.

The new section 71C sets out the conditions subject to which a community service order will be made and empowers the Minister to make rules for the implementation of such orders.

Clause 8 amends section 79 to empower the committee constituted under section 139 to make rules to regulate the practice and procedure of any part of maintenance proceedings. This amendment would, amongst other things, enable rules to be made to regulate the discovery, inspection and production of documents in maintenance proceedings, similar to the rules applicable to matrimonial proceedings made under Part X.

Clause 9 inserts a new section 79A to provide for alternative modes of service of a summons issued under Part VIII and section 65 instead of personal service.

Clause 10 inserts a new section 81A to provide for the service of an attachment of earnings order by pre-paid registered post.

Clause 11 amends section 85(1) to empower the court in attachment of earnings order proceedings to order the Central Provident Fund Board to disclose information relating to the employment, employer and Central Provident Fund contributions history of a person against whom the attachment of earnings order proceedings are commenced.

Clause 12 inserts a new Chapter 4A to Part X. The new Chapter 4A provides for the powers of the court to make ancillary orders pertaining to the division of matrimonial assets and maintenance ("orders for financial relief") pursuant to a divorce, judicial separation or annulment of marriage granted under foreign judicial proceedings, if certain conditions are satisfied. A person who desires the court to make an order for financial relief must apply to court for leave under the new section 121D. To safeguard against abuse of process, the Singapore court will have jurisdiction to hear such an application only if either party has sufficient connection to Singapore as specified in the new section 121C. The court must also be satisfied that it is appropriate for it to make an order in the case at hand having regard to the factors set out in the new subsection 121F.

Clause 13 makes a technical amendment to section 130 of the Women's Charter.

Clause 14 makes consequential amendments to section 132 arising from the introduction of the new Chapter 4A to Part X.

Clause 15 makes related amendments to the Children Development Co-Savings Act (Cap. 38) as part of the measures introduced under clause 4 to mitigate the impact of divorces on persons affected by such divorces, especially children, specifically by enabling matrimonial assets divided by a court pursuant to divorce, nullity or judicial separation proceedings to be transferred into a child's Children Development Account under that Act.

Clause 16 makes related amendments to the Guardianship of Infants Act (Cap. 122) to align the procedure on the reliance of expert advice in custody proceedings with that set out in section 130 of the Women's Charter.
